

A COMMUNITY OF READERS

Tools for Tomorrow's Workforce

Searching for a job in today's market requires prospective employees to navigate a labyrinth full of pitfalls, from online application forms and ghost jobs to automated resume screening and more. Even individuals with well-established careers are encountering new roadblocks as AI reshapes the workforce.

Fortunately, the library is here to help residents strengthen their career outlooks and prospects.

"The library has long been a place for job seekers and people looking to build their career-related skills," said Digital Services Supervisor Carolyn Levaridsen, MLIS. "Recently, more and more community members have been coming in for help with online job searching and applications."

The library is responding to that increased interest by adding a series of resume workshops and a job interview class to its existing range of career development services.

"Many patrons have questions about the content of their resume or cover letter, but we didn't previously have a good way to offer that kind of support in person," Levaridsen said. "Our goal with occupational services is to help patrons gain or improve their skills, find employment, and advance their careers."

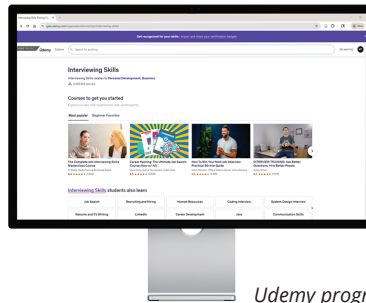

Digital Services Supervisor Carolyn Levaridsen and Digital Services Aide Robbie Pluta facilitate regular technology and resource workshops in the Main Library's Community Commons.

Resources for Job Seekers

- For in-person technical assistance, such as formatting your resume, searching for a job, and using online application forms, book a tech tutoring session at the Main Library.
- For in-person content assistance, such as organizing and writing your resume or preparing for job interviews, register for one of the new in-person Resume Workshops or a Job Interview Class.
- For content and technical assistance from home, use Brainfuse HelpNow. Upload your resume to receive personalized, detailed feedback within 24 hours. Access this eResource from the library's website using your library card, then select the "Adult Learners" tab to explore career resources, live tutoring, and more.

Resources for Skill-Building

- Learn software, creative, and business skills on-demand with Udemy. This library eResource offers thousands of video courses taught by industry professionals. Courses are helpful for trying new career paths and building confidence in your skills. Access this eResource from the library's website using your library card.
- Build your graphic design skills and create content for personal or professional use at the library's monthly Canva Club for access to Canva Pro and knowledgeable staff. Registration is required.
- Discover additional hands-on courses across basic and intermediate technologies from email and smartphones to 3D Printing, AI, and more. Check the library's online calendar or talk with staff to learn more and register.

Library News

Possible New Book Delays

A major change in the library world is affecting how quickly some new books arrive at libraries nationwide. On October 6, Baker & Taylor, the leading supplier of library content, announced it was ceasing operations immediately and closing offices, resulting in widespread cancellations of preordered materials.

Baker & Taylor had long been West Bloomfield Library's primary supplier, but staff had already set up backup vendors following supply chain disruptions last year. While this proactive, smart precaution has helped lessen the impact on the collection, the library's alternative vendors are experiencing delays while adjusting to increased demand.

If you experience a delay for an item, here's what you can do:

- Be patient as wait times for popular titles may grow.
- Download the CloudLibrary and hoopla apps to explore trending titles, with many new eBooks and eAudiobooks available for immediate download.
- Discover hidden gems while you wait for your holds by visiting library displays, browsing online book lists, or asking for personalized suggestions.
- Shop local. The library has developed a partnership with Schuler Books, so when bestsellers are delayed, the library will work with Schuler to get them on our shelves. We encourage library members to support independent bookstores, too.

As fellow readers, we understand the frustration of waiting for a book you're excited about. We hope you'll continue to explore, discover, and read with us while we navigate this industry-wide challenge together.

Community Engagement Librarian Wins National Award

West Bloomfield Library Community Engagement Librarian Emily Tobin is the recipient of the 2025 Rising Star Award through the Association of Bookmobile and Outreach Services (ABOS). This award recognizes an individual who has worked in library outreach for five years or less and demonstrates a passion for the profession.

As West Bloomfield's Community Engagement Librarian since 2022, Emily represents the library on local committees, builds community partnerships, facilitates the home delivery service, and maintains relationships with senior living facilities across the community.

Emily has spearheaded countless additional initiatives at the library, from large-scale events like the Local Author Fair and Shop Small Saturday to wildly popular programs like Book Drop subscription boxes and Adult Craft Nights. Emily also launched the library's Storybook Trail in partnership with West Bloomfield Parks, established new collections like the Health & Wellness Kits, and more.

Whether she's providing customer service at the desk, representing the library beyond the building, or shaping national conversations, Emily is a passionate rising voice in the field of library outreach.

Falling for Romance

Romance Writers of America defines romance novels as books with “a central love story and an emotionally satisfying and optimistic ending.”¹

The genre has long been lampooned as “low quality,” “cheesy,” and “unrealistic,” but romance stands out from other genres for its vast scale and wide-ranging subgenres.^{2,3} In fact, the market for romance books has been hot since 2021—when the release of screen adaptations like Bridgerton and the influence of BookTok rocked the industry.^{4,5} Learn more about this booming genre just in time for Valentine’s Day.

Spotlight on Community

Honoring the Elbling Legacy

Ruth Elbling served on the West Bloomfield Library board from her election in November 1972 through the end of her term in November 1992, including several terms as President. Over 20 years of dedicated service, Elbling saw the library through its move from its location at Orchard Lake Road to Walnut Lake Road, as well as the construction of an addition.

Ruth Elbling, photographed during her 20-year tenure on the library's board.

The West Bloomfield Library was an important place to Ruth and her husband, Stanley—so much so that they left a generous bequest of $215,000 to the library and, by extension, the community. These funds were partially disbursed over the last two years, enabling the library to invest the gift across three community-centered initiatives: the Reflection Room, the Community Commons, and the library's first outreach van.

While the community's continued support of the library through millages helps it continue to operate at a high standard, bequests and donations enable the library to pursue special projects that enrich the community in meaningful ways. Gifts like the Elblings' demonstrate how deeply a donor's legacy can shape the library's future. The library is committed to stewarding contributions with care and creating an enduring impact for generations.

A generous bequest from Ruth and Stanley Elbling has made three special projects possible. The Reflection Room (open since 2024) is a space for quiet contemplation, reading, and study breaks. The Community Commons technology (available since 2024) enables the library to offer cutting-edge tech workshops. A new outreach van (acquired November 2025) is expected to expand the library's presence beyond the building this spring, supported by an additional donation from Gary Davis in memory of Sally Davis. Other recent donor-funded projects include construction and furniture for the Commons (a generous gift by Jane Maximovich and friends in memory of Dr. Alex Maximovich) and new youth terrace furniture (a bequest from the estate of James H. Neubacher).

Kindergarten Field Trips

Kindergarten field trips to the West Bloomfield Township Public Library are a beloved outreach tradition that celebrates early literacy and community partnership. Through a strong collaboration between the West Bloomfield Library and the West Bloomfield School District, young learners are introduced to the endless opportunities their library offers.

The highlight of the trip is the 100 Picture Books to Read in Kindergarten program (K100)—developed by public librarians to inspire strong literacy habits and a lifelong love of reading. During their visits last fall, students enjoyed a special storytime where they read two engaging K100 picture books, took a guided tour of the library, and created their own colorful bookmark to take home. This partnership ensures that every kindergartener begins their reading journey surrounded by stories, exploration, and community support.

"Scotch Elementary Kindergarteners were so excited to take their first field trip ever! [...] We're so fortunate to have such a great partnership with our public library and library staff. Their kindness and enthusiasm make this partnership such a special part of our school year."

—Andrea Hill, iCenter Specialist at Scotch Elementary

Nursery Rhyme Brochure Supports Families in Early Literacy

For new parents and caregivers, knowing how to engage with a baby can feel overwhelming. Rhymes, songs, and fingerplays provide an easy place to start; they build early language pathways, soothe and entertain, and create joyful bonding moments.

In the recently refreshed Nursery Rhymes brochure, the library's early childhood specialists collected a wide range of beloved activities to weave early learning into everyday routines. Ask at the Youth Desk for the latest copy. Join the library's storytime programs to see staff read, sing, and model more early literacy practices your family can replicate at home.

DIRECTOR'S LETTER

As the Associate Library Director, I focus on maintaining the library buildings and technology infrastructure. With library facilities now 25 years old, this work is substantial as we plan for significant replacements.

The library receives many compliments on the comfort, cleanliness, and functionality of its buildings. Staff feel fortunate to serve a community that takes such pride in its library. One of my favorite things to hear is when library members bring out-of-town guests in for a visit—what a compliment! I still remember my first visit to the Main Library 22 years ago, hoping I'd be lucky enough to work here. Today, I'm striving to be a good steward of community tax dollars.

Many factors go into maintaining our spaces. At the heart of it is our small but mighty maintenance team, who work hard to keep everything clean and safe and expect the same from our contractors. Another key piece is the capital plan for building and technology replacements, which ensures equipment is replaced at the end of its lifespan.

Thanks to the approval of last year's millage, we can continue to maintain the buildings to the high standard you expect. Recent upgrades include the Main Library's air conditioning system and roof, as well as updates to exterior weatherproofing, the WiFi network, firewall, public computers, self-checkout stations, phone system, and security cameras at both branches.

Looking ahead, we are midway through a two-year project to replace carpet and ceiling tiles at the Main Library. At the Westacres Branch, we will be increasing accessibility, replacing the roof, and installing outdoor pickup lockers for 24/7 convenience.

If you haven't visited recently, I hope you'll stop in and see what's new; if you have, thank you for continuing to enjoy your award-winning local library!
